PLANTING AND CARE OF DAHLIAS

General cultural notes and directions apply one year as well as another to the ever changing condition of weather and location of different buyers and planters.

A light, sandy soil is preferable for the best results; also a sunny exposure. Stir soil 8' or 10 inches deep; a foot will be better. Apply stable manure the fall previous to the spring you plant and work thoroughly into the soil to get best results.

Separate Dahlias to one or two bulbs; plant deep, laying flat and be sure to cover six inches deep. Don't stand on end with crown out. Give it a chance to root and get a firm hold below any chance of disturbance in cultivation. Keep the ground thoroughly stirred until they begin to bloom.

Apply water freely. If work in field is done with horse plant 3 to 4 feet apart in rows and 15 inches to 2 feet in the row, closer if grown only for the bulbs. If for cut flowers 2 feet and over give more flowers and larger ones.

To avoid staking or breaking down, after two sets of leaves show, pinch off the main stalk and they will branch and need no support; but this retards the bloom, which will be ten days to two weeks later.

HARVESTING DAHLIAS

After frost has killed foliage, let them stand a few days before commencing. Loosen with plow, spade or fork. Cut off top below where frosted if possible, as a frozen stalk is liable to decay and mould to the injury of the roots, where the hard unfrosted stalk will dry and cure.

Let them lie and dry off, as you would potatoes.

Store at once where they are to stay during the winter, in cellars not under 40—50 to 60° F. is better.

If in cellar where there is furnace keep as far from it as possible.

It is impossible to give definite directions that would apply to all conditions.

Avoid changes from one extreme of temperature to another, give plenty of ventilation, avoid chilling and too much moisture, or the other extreme, too much furnace heat to shrivel and dry them, and they should keep all right.

Show and Fancy Dahlias. Gladiolus at right.
